if – into a little more we poured a little less – would we become the less we pour – instead of turning into more since we are the everything we pour?

if by pouring less – do we keep more leaving us with more to act upon than when less is poured out of the soul to grow into the more of who we are?

identity and actions intermix – one without the other can't exist – and so to be the more of who we are perhaps we must add more into the mix to understand the more of who we are before we understand how to be less.
